

Teapots & Tea Ware

This page will be the abode of the panoply of all things regarding the consumption of tea. The cup of tea is about as English as you can get; and Royal Doulton produced shapes pertaining to the consumption of tea with a capitalistic gusto. This category will include teapots (of which there are at least 32 shapes and still counting), Cups, Saucers & Trios, Creamers & Sugar bowls, Trivets, Tea Caddy's and Hot Water Pots. Come on I dare you &ndash; click on the More tab&hellip;
Series Ware Tea Shapes

What must be remembered are the various series that where applied to embossed shapes often do not have shape names, such series include Famous Ships and Moorish Gateway, when I can identify shape numbers I will. What won't be included in this category are jugs larger than creamers, (see the jugs category) and cake plates (see plate & bowl category). I will attempt to identify the shape name and the range of sizes each shape comes in. Teapots

I would suggest that the 2 cup teapots are very rare and that Doulton never made a Heatherlea creamer or a sugar bowl in this size , so this shape was used.

I must thank Heather Pitt for my example of this teapot. I have not been able to find any reference to this shape so I have named it "Greenwood Teapot". If you have a look at the lid I believe that the handle is a silhouette of Robin Hoods hat. I hazard a guess that this pot was a shape produced just for this series. Does anybody else have an example of this shaped pot in another series? Unnamed Teapot Shapes Royal Doulton Sir Roger de Coverley Teapot; dated 1937 Royal Doulton Ploughing Teapot; D.5650; era 1936 to 1948 Sizes 4 cup teapot: 18 cm (7") edge of handle to lip of spout & 14 cm (5.5") tall While I do not know the name of this teapot, I have had other examples of this shape in the Fox Hunting A Series. Tea Caddy Royal Doulton Dickens Ware Tea Caddy; D2973 (era 1908 to 1931) Size 13.5 cm (5.35") tall While this shape comes along often enough, to see it with its original cover is quite unusual, the cover is loose fitting and not many of these seem to have survived.

Teapot Stand or Trivets
Most of the trivet shapes can serve for several different shaped teapots, so in most cases it is not possible to name them as being for any one shape, there is however an exception to this rule. A trivet made to suit a Friar teapot really only suits a Friar teapot. I have decided to list the Trivet shapes giving each a letter to define which is which, except of course for the Friar as there can be no doubt which shape that it suits. To date I have identified 5 different shaped trivets decorated with Series Ware.

Slops BowlA slops bowl was part of many early teaset, it was a bowl similar to an open sugar bowl, but generally it was a bit bigger. The idea was that one could empty the dregs of a cup of tea into the bowl before pouring a second cup.
